A Monster in Loch Ness

The lake Loch Ness in the north of Scotland is famous for a legendary monster. A recent investigation, discovered signs of the monster. The legends about a giant water creature are ancient. Saint Columba recorded seeing Nessie in the sixth century. Local people think of the monster as a female and call her Nessie. People describe Nessie: a giant prehistoric creature with a round body and a very, very long neck - maybe a type of dinosaur.

Let's check!

Loch Ness isn't the biggest lake in Scotland, but because it is very deep, it is the one with the most water.

But that's not why it's famous. It is famous because many people believe that a gigantic, prehistoric animal lives there.

Let's read!

A Monster in Loch Ness

In July, 1933, a Scottish couple saw «a most extraordinary animal» cross the road in front of their car. It was as big as an elephant, but it had a long neck, like a giraffe or a dinosaur. Two more people said they saw the monster that year, and suddenly the story became famous around the world.

What did you understand?

- extraordinary animal
- as big as an elephant
- long neck like a giraffe
- monster
